

General Practice NSW has been commissioned by NSW Health to work with selected rural & remote Divisions of General Practice including NEDGP to conduct an early pregnancy care project. This project is designed to expand the early pregnancy services available to women in NSW including those provided by early pregnancy units (EPUs), early pregnancy assessment services (EPASS), new public antenatal clinics, a telephone advices line and relevant information.

As part of this project, the Division is providing all GPs with Quitline information for their patients. All Quitline details are listed below.
